Lower your energy bills when you lower the blinds

You can save an estimated $45 a year on energy costs by lowering your shades during the day in the summer and opening them in the winter.

That simple tip is one of the energy-saving ideas available at www.togetherwesave.com.

Touchstone Energy Cooperative's "Together We Save" campaign recommends small changes that you can make around the house to save both energy and money.

Rock Energy Cooperative is participating in the national drive to help members decrease their energy costs.

A considerable amount of heat transfers through windows.

If you have single-pane windows, consider doing the following:

- Tighten and weather-strip old windows and then add storm windows. Replace old single-glazed windows with new double-glazed windows.

- In summer, consider adding solar screening to west-facing windows that catch a lot of heat late in the day. Solar screening is sold at many home improvement stores.

- "Low-e" coatings on glass can help reduce heat loss through windows in cold climates.

More than a dozen other energy-efficient tips are available at the web site. Rock Energy members who visited the site have learned about simple steps that can help them save more than $30,000 a year in energy costs.
